RESPONSES TO THE CREDIT CRISIS - REFERENCE LIST

Over the last several weeks, various government agencies and the Congress have taken numerous steps to help restore normal functioning to the U.S. credit markets. These steps include, among others, enactment of the Emergency Economic Stabilization Act of 2008, establishment of various funding or lending facilities, and adoption of several new guarantee programs.

To assist members in keeping track of these government efforts, the Institute has prepared the attached reference list. The list is organized by government agency/branch and covers the primary actions taken since September 1. The list will be posted on the Institute's public website and updated periodically.
