Trading and Markets RE: ESMA Publishes Final Report on Postponement of Phase-in Period for Central Clearing for Certain Counterparties

On November 14, 2016, the European Securities and Markets Authority (“ESMA”) issued a final report that would delay the implementation of the clearing obligation of certain over-the-counter (“OTC”) derivatives under the European Market Infrastructure Regulation (“EMIR”) for a category of counterparties.[\[1\]](#) ESMA is proposing this delay because of the difficulties that small financial counterparties are facing in establishing necessary clearing arrangements and the limited impact that these counterparties pose on systemic risk. The European Commission now has three months to determine whether to endorse ESMA’s proposal.

As previously reported, the EU authorities adopted three Delegated Regulations (“RTS”) that mandate central clearing of three classes of derivatives: (1) OTC interest rate derivatives denominated in EUR, GBP, JPY, and USD; (2) OTC index credit default swaps; and (3) OTC interest rate derivatives denominated in NOK, PLN, and SEK.[\[2\]](#) The RTS include an implementation schedule for the clearing obligations based on the categories of the counterparties.[\[3\]](#) The Final Report would amend these RTS to delay the obligation to clear the covered classes of derivatives for Category 3 firms until June 21, 2019.
