Reminders

In advance of each call, I will send an email, reminding working group members about the upcoming call and asking those who plan to participate to submit any additional issues for the agenda, which members will receive once finalized. Typically, these are questions on which members seek feedback from their peers. During the call, the member who suggested the agenda item will pose the question to the group for discussion.

The value of these calls derives in large part from members identifying issues for the agenda and call participants being willing to actively discuss those issues. Accordingly, I encourage each of you to submit agenda items and actively participate in the discussion.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me. I look forward to our next call.
