What a Difference a Year Makes—Prime Money Market Funds' Holdings Update

As the eurozone debt crisis began to intensify last summer, prime money market funds took steps to gradually reduce their overall holdings of eurozone issuers. In May 2011, securities of eurozone issuers accounted for 31.1 percent of assets of U.S. prime money market funds (chart). Since then, the share of eurozone holdings declined to a trough of 12.0 percent in December 2011 and has remained low. As of May 2012, this share stands at 15.5 percent, with over 96 percent of these eurozone holdings in German, French, and the Dutch issuers (table). The tiny remaining holdings of Spain and Italy are virtually all asset-backed securities issued by U.S. or UK subsidiaries, and as such depend more on U.S. or UK economic fundamentals. At the end of May 2012, these "Spanish" and "Italian" holdings were $925 million and $103 million, respectively.

Note: Data exclude prime money market funds not registered under the Securities Act of 1933.
